Maskros 100180

Maskros, created by Ingrid Backman and originally launched in 2005, is a true Almedahls design classic. The archetypal flower shape offers a strong graphic appeal, and the pattern has remained popular in all types of public spaces. This updated concept brings together three design expressions in one collection. Four of the original colourways with a white base have been retained, while new additions include colourways with coloured bases, some featuring white flowers and others with multi-coloured designs.

The versatile colour concept allows for numerous combination possibilities, while the timeless design fits seamlessly into most public environments. The textured fabric also provides delicate light filtering, adding both functionality and elegance to any space.
