MASKROS 100180

MASKROS, created by Ingrid Backman and first launched in 2005, is an Almedahls design classic. The archetypal flower shape has a strong graphic appeal, and the pattern has remained popular in all types of public spaces. The updated collection brings together three design expressions. Four of the original colourways with a white base have been retained, while new additions include colourways with coloured bases, some with white flowers and others with multicoloured designs.

The three expressions offer many combination possibilities, and the graphic design suits most public environments. The textured fabric filters daylight softly while keeping the room open.
